Tsing Shan Monastery – Hall of Merit
Castle Peak, Tuen Mun

Much have been mentioned in county gazetteers (縣志) and other sources on Castle Peak (青山, literally meaning green mountain) in Tuen Mun. It was said that Master Pei Tu (杯渡禪師, water-crossing on a cup) from Southeast Asia visited the mountain in the Lau Song dynasty (劉宋, 420-479). The mountain had since then long been called Pei Tu Mountain (杯渡山), or holy mountain, for its association with the eminent monk. Master Pei Tu then returned to Southeast Asia in his old age. The story goes that after his departure, the Pei Tu Cave (杯渡岩) he had resided was worshipped by a nun, who also established a Buddhist nun hermit (菴堂). In 1829, the To (陶) clan, which had settled in Tuen Mun since the fifteenth century, built a Taoist temple named Tsing Wan Kwun (青雲觀) and the nuns moved into the temple. The site was then extensively redeveloped from the late 1910s by Chan Chun-ting (陳春亭), a successful merchant and Buddhist enthusiast who later bestowed as Master Hin Ki (顯奇法師). He purchased lots of the adjoining land starting from 1910. With his effort, the Tsing Shan Monastery (青山禪院) first constructed in the 1910-1920s became a renowned Buddhist monastery, one of the biggest in the territory attracting overseas and local worshippers and tourists.

Historical Interest

The monastery at the mid-level of Castle Peak is some 160 metres above sea level. It is composed of building complexes clustered up the southern slope. The site is dominated by the main terrace including the “Heung Hoi Ming Shan” pai-lau (「香海名山」牌樓), the Mountain Gatehouse (山門), the Main Hall (大雄寶殿), the Hall for the Protection of the Law (護法殿), the Bodhisattva and Ksitigarbha Hall (菩提薩埵殿), the Hall of Merit (功德堂, alias Ancestral Hall, 祖堂), the Guest Hall (客堂), a dormitory (宿舍) and others. In its upper level are the Absolute Gate of the Law (「不二法門」牌樓), the Kwun Yam (Goddess of Mercy) Pavilion (觀音閣) and the Devotee’s Forest (居士林, alias Nunnery, 定厂).

Architectural Merit

The Hall of Merit is adjacent to the right of the Main Hall and can be accessible through the verandah of the latter. It was constructed towards the end of the 1910s. It is built along the slope of the mountain. It is in Qing vernacular form of brick construction with part of its upper floor added in later stage thus having its roof part in concave tiling and part in flat concrete. Its exterior is painted in yellow and above its entrance on the ground floor are four characters Kung Tak Chung Lum (功德叢林) inscribed with a pair of plastered couplets flanking on each side and plastered motifs of vase and lotus. The characters Kung Tak Tong (功德堂) are engraved at the entrance on the upper floor. A wall frieze of plaster moulding of landscape and elephants is on the facade. The room of the ground floor is for storage. The rear portion of the upper floor is for worship of soul tablets. Those of the past Abbots of the monastery, including Master Hin Ki, and the Tos are in the middle whilst the others are on the side walls in rows. The front portion of the upper floor houses statues of Buddhas on an altar and an image of a Buddha on another for worship. The interior of the hall is plastered in white.

The monastery has a historical link of Buddhist and Taoist development in the holy mountain for a period of over 1,500 years. It is a rare Chinese religious complex among other temples and monasteries in Hong Kong. The oldest structures of the monastery though only built in the 1910s-1920s have considerable built heritage value to recapture the long and much talk-about history of the site and area. After the monastery's completion in late 1920s, a number of repairs and reconstruction took place.
