新界大嶼山大澳吉慶後街石狗神壇

地區：離島區

位於大澳吉慶後街的「石狗神壇」，估計已存在超過一百年。其中一個說法是南中國的原住民「僛族」或其分支「佘族」（同「輦族」）的狗崇拜習俗的遺風。隨著唐、宋兩朝中原人南遷，原住民漸被同化，其文化也逐漸湮沒。「石狗神壇」內的石狗像與象徵「土地」的三角形石和刻有佛教「南無阿彌陀佛」的石碑並置，可見現時對石狗的供奉與供奉土地無異，皆為祈求一境之平安，驅走惡運。

Shrine with Stone Dog, Kat Hing Back Street, Tai O, Lantau Island, N.T.

District: Islands

The shrine with stone dog in Kat Hing Back Street, Tai O, was laid here more than 100 years ago. There are many legends about the stone dog statue. One says that it might be related to the dog-worshipping tradition of the Yao or She tribes in southern China. When southern China absorbed more culture of central China due to population migration since Tang and Song dynasties, the aboriginals became assimilated into the Han culture, so as their religious ritual. In this shrine, apart from the granite dog statue, there are also a triangular-shaped stone and a rectangular-shaped tablet bearing Chinese characters meaning “Namo Amitābhā”. It would seem that the shrine now serves as a shrine for earth god, a patron deity maintaining peace and keeping evil and trouble away.

Zonta White House, No. 4010 Tai Po Road – Yuen Chau Tsai, N.T.

District: Tai Po

Built in 1906, Zonta White House was originally used to accommodate the managerial staff engaged on the construction of the Kowloon-Canton Railway. During the early 1920s, it was used as quarters for the Inspector of Vernacular Schools in Tai Po. At one time during the pre-World War II times, it was leased by the Bible Churchmen's Missionary Society to facilitate their activities in Tai Po. Around 1935, it was re-named from "White Cottage" to "White House". During the wartime, it became a Japanese military police headquarters. After the war, it was taken by the government and renovated to become quarters for civil servants. Since 1999, it has been used by the Hong Kong Family Welfare Society as a family retreat centre and given the name of "Zonta White House".

The house is a two-storey villa with white painted external walls, high ceilings and decorative windows and doors. It may be described as a neo-classical colonial house. The historic buildings nearby include: Old District Office North, Island House, Old Police Bungalow, and Tai Po Lookout.
